Key Features

As a chemical educator, are you certain that your institution or current educators' legal liability policy will defend you should a lawsuit arise from your academic duties? Currently the insurance marketplace offers minimal protection for chemical educators by excluding Contingent Bodily Injury and Chemical Exposure from their standard educators' legal liability policies.

The ACS endorsed Chemical Educators Legal Liability policy provides the unique coverage necessary for chemistry educators. The plan helps educators protect themselves against risks within classrooms, teaching and research labs and community outreach activities.

The Board of Trustees, Group Insurance Plans for ACS Members worked in partnership with Hays and Lloyds of London to develop a Chemical Educators Legal Liability plan that provides the unique coverage needed by chemical educators to address the exposures of high school, undergrad and instructional staff and faculty employed by private, public, charter and higher educational institutions.

- The Chemical Educators Legal Liability serves as a primary insurance for individuals, over and above the coverage provided by the institution
- A liability limit of $1 million from professional liability lawsuits
- Sublimit at $500,000 for Pollution Liability with option to increase limit to $1,000,000
- Sublimit at $500,000 for Contingent Liability with option to increase limit to $1,000,000
- Sublimit of $25,000 for Sexual Harassment - provided you are found not guilty or the charges are dismissed and subject to any other applicable policy term and/or condition
- Sublimit of $250,000 for Intellectual Property
- Plan covers claims brought against an insured and reported to the insurer during the policy term
